

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Savery of Philadelphia was the hostess Friday evening at an elaborate dancing party given at the Pleasanton in honor of the Misses Ethel and Alice Spalding. The spacious lobby and the main dining-room were used for dancing and that most graceful of greens, the pepper bough, was the decoration used. Kaai's orchestra was stationed on the stair landing behind a screen of the same spicy greenery. The private dining-room was done in golden shower and candles shaded with yellow silk, and it was here that the punch and refreshments were served. In the card room were large clusters of American Beauty roses and here the guests who did not feel inclined for dancing could while the time away. Mrs. Savery in a gown of rare white lace made a charming hostess while the guests of honor, Miss

RENNID EVISCEGROP A.

I had read that five young ladies
A progressive dinner gave,
And the guests rode out in autos
From the downtown to the wave;
Ate a course with each progression,
Back and forth they fairly flew,
Exclamations of enjoyment
What an ideal! Quaint and new.

Now that very selfsame evening,
After limy couch had sought,
Dear old Morpheus came a-knocking
And an invitation brought.
He said that we were dining
At five places, different,
And to reach them that our hostess
Had a great big automobile.

In a short time we had started;
My companion had the wheel,
And the pace he set was startling;
My poor brain began to reel,
When we drew up at a cottage
Where the lights were rather low,
Can this be right for number one?
That's what I'd like to know.

Then we clambered from our auto,
Found, when we had got inside,
That our hostess had been waiting.
Had four servants to provide.
First they served us nuts and raisins—
This did not surprise seem—
Then came leeks that were colored
To a most alluring green.

Fourteen minutes found us stopping
To partake of number two.
And the salad that was served us
Most decidedly was new—
Made of shell-fish, shrimp or lobster
Pepper, onion-leaves of green
And the whole mixed up together
With a dressing made of cream.

Number three: A bit more like it,
'Twas a turkey (lovely fowl).
But the dressing from inside him.
'Twas enough to make him howl.
It is called a Southern dressing
And I hear is quite the rage;
Just a few things that are in it—
Oysters, chestnuts, bread and sage.

Number four: It brought the entire.
Please to make this entire nous,
For I really could not tell if
'Twas an entire or a stew.
But before the course was over
I had come to understand
That 'twas something made especial
For the serving of Dreamland.

The soup? It came along at last,
Way down at number five.
Old Morpheus said, "Now, jump right in;
We'll soon at home arrive."

I awakened with an awful start,
Gazed 'round the room in dread.
What! No dinner eaten backward?
I was safe at home in bed.

I've decided that old Morpheus
As a chauffeur will not do,
For he mixes up his numbers
And his course he steers untrue.
If he ever tries to persuade you
A course dinner to attend,
You be sure to make him promise
To begin at the right end.
